Directions: After reading the passages below, fill in the blanks to make the passages coherent and grammatically correct. For the blanks with a given word, fill in each blank with the proper form of the given word; for the other blanks, use one word that best fits each blank.

The debate on organ transplants yesterday reminded me of a friend who is currently waiting for a donor kidney and the enormous impact his current health is having __1_ his family. It's sad to see how quickly a person's health can decline in this situation, so scientific progress is always necessary.

The news that researchers have injected human cells into pig embryos (胚胎), __2_ (hope) ultimately to create a pancreas (胰腺) made completely from human cells, has been met with some caution. But __3_ this experiment leads to a successful transplant, it could mean developing other human organs. Some critics are concerned that such practices __4_ create organ farms and increase animal suffering. So the remedy should be that we get more people to donate organs ___ __5_using animals. Prolonging human life and the quality of human life __6_(lie) in the heart of organ donation and transplant. For __7_ who oppose donation, a common answer is __8_ the human body even in death is not something to be plundered (掠夺) __9_ (aid) scientific experiments and that more importantly, we cannot give away what we don't own in the first place. They see the drive for organ transplants in post enlightenment bioethics as seductive but arrogant in its aim to transcend mortality.

A few years ago, one of my cousins donated his kidney to his mother who had been on dialysis for a while. No one asked him for any explanation---we instinctively felt that __10__ he was doing was right, an act of generosity for someone he loved.
