The Internet plays a big part in human life. We use it for work and entertainment. We can also use it to learn a new language, __1__ (contact) family and friends we care about and find new recipes on the Internet or advice on staying healthy. “__2__ the advantage of using Internet goes on and on, using the Internet too much can be bad for our health”, say researchers.

A new study finds heavy Internet use may be connected to high blood pressure in an unlikely group --- teenagers. The study results show that teens __3__ spend at least 14 hours a week online were more likely to have high blood pressure. High blood pressure makes your heart and blood vessels work too hard and can also cause heart and kidney disease. It is also closely linked to some forms of dementia, a brain disease, __4__ is marked by memory disorders, personality changes, and a __5__ (reduce) ability to reason.

The Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, Michigan did the study. It involved 335 young people, from 14 to 17 years old. One hundred thirty-four of the teens were described as "heavy Internet users." Researchers found that out of these 134 teens, 26 had high blood pressure. The researchers say the study is the first __6__ (connect) heavy web use and high blood pressure. Other research has connected that heavy Internet use with health problems __7__ anxiety, depression and obesity.

The lead researcher of the study is Andrea Cassidy-Bushrow. In a statement she said, "Using the Internet is part of our daily life but it shouldn't consume us." For the purpose of the study, she explains, teens considered heavy Internet users were online on "average 25 hours a week." Ms. Cassidy-Bushrow adds that __8__ is important for teens is to take "regular breaks from their computers or smartphones" and to do some "kind of physical activity." She also suggests that parents __9__ limit their children's use of the Internet to two hours a day, five days a week.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says, 70 million, or 29%, of American adults have high blood pressure. Just more than half of those people have taken steps to control it. The CDC estimates __10__ high blood pressure costs the United States $46 billion each year.

The study was published in the Journal of School Nursing.
